We know how challenging it can be to balance all the demands parents and carers have to cope with. That's why we've put together some tips to help. All children need boundaries and discipline, and this guide helps you develop what works for you and your child.

EVERY FAMILY IS DIFFERENT, SO MAKE
THIS GUIDE YOUR OWN
You can make notes on it, customise it – whatever works for you.

Positive parenting uses techniques that work well for every child. These techniques will help you build and strengthen your relationship with your child, leading to them being happier, along with less stress for you.

All parents can come under pressure or stress from time to time, and it can even lead to them wanting to smack their children – although many parents regret it later. But evidence shows that it is not an effective way to discipline your children.

In Scotland and Jersey (and, from March 2022, in Wales), the law no longer permits any type of physical punishment of children.

Remember

Positive parenting techniques are much more likely to work and leave you feeling more positive about your parenting.

Understanding your child's needs

Children's needs and behaviours change as they get older, and understanding these needs will help you better understand your child. A lot has been written about the needs of children and advice for parents, and we cover some of the key areas here. If you'd like more detailed advice you can talk to the NSPCC helpline.

1. Babies

Babies behave as they do to get their needs met. For example, when they cry they're trying to tell you that they need something – maybe they're hungry, need their nappy changed or feel tired.

Older babies may show what appears like a 'stubborn streak' – spitting out food or wriggling away from a nappy change. All they are doing is trying to express their likes and dislikes in the only way they can.

When you're stressed you may feel your baby is being 'deliberately naughty' or trying to provoke you. This is not possible. Remember you should never shout at, scream at, hit, shake or smack a baby.

2. Toddlers

All toddlers test limits and have tantrums. Research shows that a child's brain is still developing during this period, so there are limits to how much they're able to control their emotions. Remember that behaviour in toddlers which is often seen as naughty is actually quite normal and part of growing up.

3. School age

School-age children are constantly learning and exploring their world. They may have lots of questions as they start to form their own views on issues. As they move towards being more independent they may seem to push boundaries and become more challenging. This is a necessary part of growing up.

4. Teenagers

As children continue to develop their own identities in their teenage years, they might become more challenging – sometimes seeming 'moody' or withdrawn, or not as talkative and open as their parents would like. They might be more inclined to disagree with their parents, or choose different views. Friends (and celebrities) will become a bigger influence and your child may not always do what you would like.

As children get older, they can experience difficult emotions. Some children find it hard to talk to their parents about feelings and may want to speak to Childline

How can I set boundaries?

All children need love, guidance and to have rules and boundaries. Rules and boundaries help families to understand how to behave towards each other, and what's OK and not OK. But the best way to go about this will vary based on your child's age and stage of development. All children are different and develop and reach milestones at different rates.

Top tips...

for all ages

- Keep guidance simple and consistent.
- If your child is behaving in a way you don't want them to, clearly explain what you want them to do instead.
- Be available and make time for your child, so they will come to you when they feel something is wrong or they are upset.
- Keep talking and listening to your child even if at times it feels like a challenge. Start listening from a very early age and set a pattern for life.
- Review family rules as your child gets older and recognise the different needs of children living at home. For example, you shouldn't expect the same from your 12-year-old as you would from your four-year-old.
- Get support from friends and try any good ideas they have found helpful.
- If you are struggling and feel things are getting out of hand, get advice from your GP, a health visitor, or your child's teacher.

for babies – toddlers

- Introduce boundaries from an early age.
- Reflect to your child that you know how they may be feeling – for example, saying “I know you're frustrated,” if your child is struggling to do something.
- Share your own feelings if you find it helps to relieve your stress – for example, “I know you're tired but I'm tired too.”
- Try to avoid using orders and ultimatums.

for school age – teenagers

- Be willing and give your child opportunities to show they can be trusted.
- Avoid criticism wherever possible. If your child has done something wrong, explain that it is the action and not them that you're unhappy with.
- Try to avoid getting trapped in petty arguments. There are rarely any winners!
- Consider ways to negotiate or offer choices as your child gets older.

Rewards and discipline

Different parents will have different views about the best ways to encourage children to adapt their behaviour. While some younger children may respond well to incentives like reward charts, and some older children may respond to the offer of being allowed to stay out a bit later, other children won't.

- Only you will know what works for your child but here are some helpful points to think about.
- Praise children whenever possible for all they do.
  - Reward positive behaviour and consider asking what would be a good reward.
  - Avoid making rash decisions when you're angry.
  - Talk to your child about the rewards and consequences of their behaviour, and do it before rather than after.
  - Take time to really listen to what your children are saying and explain to them what you are feeling.
  - Be a role model and don't do things that you wouldn't want your children to do.

Smacking is never a good idea

Ideas on bringing up children have changed, and we now know a lot more about the effects of smacking. Smacking can hurt children's feelings – making them resentful and angry, and damaging the relationship between parent and child. This makes parenting and discipline harder in the long run, not easier. Smacking can get out of control.

This also comes back to being a role model. If you smack your child, they may think this is acceptable behaviour and treat other people in the same way.

Children may avoid being smacked by lying or hiding how they feel. And they may become withdrawn – not developing independence.

Please note, in Scotland and Jersey (and, from March 2022, in Wales), the law no longer permits any type of physical punishment of children.

Finding the right balance of rewards and discipline is a key part of positive parenting.

Keeping your cool

It's important to find ways to relieve your stress and manage if you're feeling upset or angry. Lots of things, not only children's behaviour, can make us feel stressed – from family relationships to managing a work-life balance, health, housing, poverty, unemployment and much more. You want to be the best parent you can, but being stressed is stressful!

When stress takes over, it can make you lose your temper and say or do things you later regret. You might find yourself saying something hurtful or smacking your child. Living in a stressful home can also impact on your child's feelings and healthy development. But you can avoid this by managing stress and anger.

- Accept support

This may be from your family, a friend or by using online forums. Knowing that there are other parents in the same situation can be a great encouragement.

- Make time for yourself

This may involve doing things like exercising or listening to music. It can be as simple as a long soak in the bath, watching a film or going for a walk. If you live with a partner, agree a way to make sure you both get time off.

- Get help

This is a positive step to take and not a sign of weakness. If you're feeling stressed and anxious all the time, seek some outside advice. A range of difficulties may get in the way of being a parent and it's important to get help. Talk to your GP or health visitor, or call the NSPCC helpline on 0808 800 5000.

- Be as prepared as possible

Parenting can of course be stressful at certain times, so consider ways of dealing with this in advance. For example, if your child gets bored and irritable on long journeys, or waiting for things like doctor's appointments, take a couple of books or activities to keep them busy.

- Don't overlook success

If you have coped well with something difficult, be proud of what you've achieved. Celebrate your children's successes too.

Look after yourself

Being a parent or carer is so important. While it's common to feel less needed as children get older, or to feel more like a taxi driver or cleaner, you are the person your child will look to for help. Finding time for yourself is something you shouldn't overlook or feel guilty about. It may take planning but having a break can help you to be the best parent you can be.

Building positive relationships

If parent-child relationships become damaged, it can affect the way a child feels or behaves. Finding ways to show unconditional love and affection to your child is important. But this can be easier said than done, especially when you're tired or juggling different needs.

Spend time with your child and learn together. This can help increase your child's confidence, strengthen your bond and also help you to better understand their needs.

Top five tips:

- Show your child you're interested in what they like. Think of enjoyable activities you can do together.
- Think of times when you have seen a positive change in your child's behaviour and anything you could learn from that experience.
- Ask your child for their views and be willing to listen. This can help you to see things from their perspective.
- Don't give up or be too hard on yourself if things don't immediately change. Focus on small steps and achievable goals.
- Be prepared to compromise and admit you've been wrong, and sometimes make mistakes yourself.

Together we can help children who've been abused to rebuild their lives. Together we can protect children at risk. And, together, we can find the best ways of preventing child abuse from ever happening.

We change the law. We visit schools across the country, helping children understand what abuse is. And, through our Childline service, we give young people a voice when no one else will listen.

But all this is only possible with your support. Every pound you raise, every petition you sign, every minute of your time, will help make sure we can fight for every childhood.
